AN OPEN LETTER

To the Public in General, of Cincinnati:

Machinists' strike not over or any way near over unless the employers are about ready to sign up.

That article that appeared in the Enquirer last Tuesday morning caused the Central Labor Council to appoint a committee for the purpose of investigating the conditions of the Machinists' strike, and we find that instead of ninety per cent of the strikers being back at work, that only about ten per cent of them have returned and about twenty-five per cent have left the city and the remainder are standing solid, fighting for cause of which they were forced to strike for, some nine weeks ago, the right to organize and the eight-hour day with recognition of a Committee.

For many years back the Machine Tool Shops of this city, as well as many other shops, have worked their machinists at ten and fifteen cents an hour less than the wage paid in other cities for machinists, and not being satisfied with that they have forced upon them every kind of task and premium systems that the so-called systemizers could think of, until the machinists have decided that they must organize as their employers have done, and to demand that they be treated at least as humans and not worked as slaves, with men standing on one side of them with a stop-watch and another on the other side with a speed indicator, telling them they must finish a certain piece of work at a given length of time or lose a percentage of what they are lead to believe they can earn. These are some of the many things that the machinists are fighting for, and we wish to say to the people of this city that if they will take time to look into the wage and conditions of these men that they will stand as the Central Labor Council is standing, solid behind this strike.

We find that the machinists have offered everything in the line of fairness to try and bring an adjustment of this strike, but the employers have refused to consider anything whatever, claiming that they were going to force these men into submission by starvation, and no doubt they thought they would have an easy task, as they have only been paying a starvation wage in their shops to the great majority of their men, but the labor movement of this city and other cities says the machinists will not starve or be forced to scab to LIVE.

EXECUTIVE BOARD CENTRAL LABOR COUNCIL.

The following is a copy of the Machinists' Agreement submitted to the Employers, which reads as follows:
